INTRODUCTION

This report presents final results of the 1961 Census dealing with the rural and urban distribution of the population of Canada. Tables are included to provide an additional classification of the rural segment to show the population living on farms and the urban population according to size group.

The definition of rural and urban for the 1961 Census was substantially the same as that used in 1956. Briefly, the 1961 definition specified that all cities, towns, and villages of 1,000 and over, whether incorporated or not, were classed as urban, as well as the urbanized fringes of (a) cities classed as metropolitan areas, (b) those classed as other major urban areas, and (c) certain smaller cities, if the city together with its urbanized fringe was 10,000 population or over. The remainder of the population was classed as rural. The main differences from 1956 result from the exclusion of any non-urbanized fringes within metropolitan areas, and the inclusion of urbanized fringes adjoining those smaller cities covered in (c) above.

The classification of "rural farm" comprises all persons living in dwellings situated on farms in rural localities. A farm for 1961 is defined as a holding of one or more acres with sales of agricultural products of $50 or more. This differs from 1956 when a farm was defined as a holding of: (1) three acres or more in size, or (2) from one to three acres with agricultural production in 1955 valued at $250 or more. A sizeable part of the decrease shown for the rural farm population in 1961 is due to this change in farm definition.

The following statement shows the rural and urban distribution of Canada's population for the 1951-61 period. For more detailed explanations on the effects of definitional changes, and historical comparisons 1901-61, see Report No. 7.1—2 (Rural and Urban Population) of Volume VII (Part 1).

Le présent rapport donne les résultats définitifs du recensement de 1961 quant à la répartition rurale et urbaine de la population du Canada. Certains tableaux répartissent encore davantage la population rurale suivant qu'elle vivait dans les fermes et la population urbaine suivant différentes tranches de taille.

Les notions de rural et d'urbain utilisées au recensement de 1961 sont pratiquement les mêmes qu'en 1956. La définition de 1961 classe dans le secteur urbain les cités, villes et villages, constitués ou non, de 1,000 habitants et plus, ainsi que les banlieues urbanisées a) des zones métropolitaines de recensement, b) des autres grandes agglomérations urbaines, et c) de certaines petites villes lorsqu'elles comptaient avec la banlieue 10,000 habitants et plus. Le reste de la population constitue le secteur rural. Les principales différences entre 1961 et 1956 sont l'exclusion des banlieues non urbanisées des zones métropolitaines et l'inclusion des banlieues urbanisées de certaines petites villes classées à c) ci-dessus.

La catégorie "rurale agricole" comprend toutes les personnes habitant des logements situés dans des fermes de localités rurales. Au recensement de 1961, la ferme était une terre d'une acre ou plus dont les ventes de produits agricoles avaient atteint $50 ou plus. En 1956, la ferme était une terre 1) d'une superficie de trois acres ou plus, ou 2) d'une à trois acres et d'une production agricole de $250 ou plus en 1955. Une bonne partie de la diminution de la population rurale agricole en 1961 tient à ce changement de définition de la ferme.

L'exposé qui suit donne la répartition de la population du Canada entre population rurale et population urbaine pour la décennie 1951-1961. Le lecteur trouvera dans le rapport n° 7.1—2 (population rurale et population urbaine) du volume VII (1re partie), des explications plus détaillées quant aux effets exercés par les nouvelles définitions, ainsi que des comparaisons chronologiques pour 1901-1961.

[1] Adjustment of 1961 farm population is based on the decrease in number of farms through changes in definitions.— L'ajustement de la population agricole de 1961 est fondé sur la diminution du nombre de fermes due à la nouvelle définition.
